Kite Flying

Day Tomorrow!

Tomorrow is going to be a very fun day at QISS! Grade 2 will be giving their Key Assignment presentation first thing in the morning, and then the entire Lower School will come together for some kite flying out on the soccer field! You will also be able to buy tasty treats from the Healthy Sharks Snack Bar. Don't forget your kite!

Hello Grade 2 Parents!

The 2014-2015 school year is coming to a close, but that means the students at QISS are working harder than ever! Key Assignment Day is tomorrow, and the students have been working tirelessly to prepare their presentation. In the pictures below, you can see our first attempt at building a volcano. The class did a great job that day, but the dough would not dry! The volcano would not stay together, so we had to try again. This time we tried using some clay, and the class built an awesome strata cone volcano! The clay dried nicely, and the volcano is ready to go. You can also see our earthquake simulation, which the students really enjoyed. You will see all this and more at our Key Assignment presentation tomorrow morning!

The students have been having fun in their other classes, too. Monday was Children's Day, and several parents came to celebrate in Chinese class with some games and activities. Grade 2 has also been practicing for the Spring Concert, which is tomorrow after Key Assignments. We'll see you tomorrow!
